ABOUT ACT QUESTION TIME

The ACT's annual Question Time event is looked forward to each year as an opportunity to look beyond the day-to-day concerns of the corporate treasurer, and consider the bigger picture; to explore major social and economic issues and how they will shape the business environment in the years ahead.

The theme for this year's event is 'Inclusive Capitalism'.

The idea of responsible capitalism has received a lot of recent media attention. Propelled onto the front pages a couple of years ago by the occupy movements in London and New York, themes of inequality and wealth distribution have since been expanded on by thought leaders from Thomas Pikety to the Pope in his speech concerning economic exclusion and inequality and support of free enterprise.

In a speech in May of this year Bank of England Governor Mark Carney heavily criticised the existing structures of capitalism, calling on bankers and business leaders to consider 'social capital' alongside economic capital, and encouraging 'Inclusive Capitalism'. To fail to do so, he warned, could risk another crisis, or even the failure of the capitalist system.

We invite you to join us as a panel of business and finance leaders and social commentators to debate the issue, and explore the possible implications for policy makers, regulators, banks and corporates.

Discussion points will include:

- a new social contract or merely a PR project?
- the social responsibility of business
- will financial reforms make a difference in the long term?
- how can corporates help make capitalism more responsible?

Help shape the conversation by submitting your questions in advance to events@treasurers.org or tweet @actupdate using #qtact14
