Charity

The ACT is delighted to be supporting Hand in Hand as the charity partner of the year for the third consecutive year. Over the last two years, thanks to your generosity, we have raised an amazing £120,000 to help fund two villages in Kenya. Your donation is already at work creating businesses and jobs in the villages of Ntirimiti, near Mount Kenya, and Ngulini, some 100km East of Nairobi.

This year, we hope to raise money for our Fund For Fearless Women.

The Fund will support women in East Africa and Afghanistan to change their world for the better – to challenge the accepted way of doing things and the cultural norms that say 'no, you can't' and 'no, you shouldn't'. Hand in Hand can help women beat the odds and succeed as entrepreneurs. The money they earn and the confidence they gain changes everything. Whole families and communities rise with them.

We work in four key stages. First, we create Self-Help Groups where women support each other, save together and learn together. Next, we provide business and skills training that helps make the most of their potential. Third, we make sure they can get loans and the tools they need to get started. Last, we help scale up their businesses, reaching bigger markets and stronger supply chains.

With our help and your support, here's just some of what they've achieved per project so far:

- 30% average increases in income
- 99% of women report more freedom and influence at home
- 95% of families have savings to see them through a crisis like coronavirus

Check out the silent auction; there's a signed shirt from McLaren, a stay at a flat in Cornwall plus many more exciting lots to choose from. And don't forget the prize draw for a chance to win a stunning Orbit No.3 diamond necklace by Swiss jewellers, Montluc.

90% of the money raised will go to Hand in Hand and 10% will go to the ACT Educational Trust to provide bursaries for students.

Louis Theroux

Louis Theroux is a documentary-maker, producer and writer. His unique style of investigation has looked into everything from celebrities to the US prison system, far-right groups to adult films. His simple yet direct style has revealed the personalities, lifestyles, loyalties and beliefs of those often misunderstood, written off or ignored. Starting out in print journalism, Louis moved to television as a correspondent on TV Nation, Michael Moore's ground-breaking documentary series examining the strange, dangerous and controversial elements of American life. Louis then joined the BBC to develop his Weird Weekends series. Louis Theroux's Weird Weekends established his signature style, putting himself at the heart of the subject, often in quite dangerous and compromising positions. He's trained with American wrestlers, mixed with gang members, and interviewed those on the fringes of society. He also spent time with self-help gurus, out of work actors, and rappers. Rejecting the more confrontational style of other documentarians in favour of an informal, curious, unassuming approach, his work is consistently revealing, informative and entertaining.

Returning to the UK, Louis followed Weird Weekends with When Louis Met... in which he spent time with a range of unusual celebrities from Ann Widdicombe to Chris Eubank to Neil and Christine Hamilton. He also famously made a film about Jimmy Savile, a production often cited in the subsequent revelations about the TV and radio presenter's abusive history. Louis returned to the subject over a decade later, when Savile's crimes were public, in a very personal re-examination simply titled Louis Theroux: Savile. Louis has also looked at dementia, South African extremists, gambling, transgender issues in children, motherhood, eating disorders and cosmetic surgery. Other famous exposés and acclaimed investigations have included The Most Hated Family in America, The City Addicted to Crystal Meth, Extreme Love – Autism, and Louis Theroux's LA Stories. He produced a feature-length attempt to examine the secretive world of Scientology in My Scientology Movie, and described many of his experiences on and off camera in his book Gotta Get Theroux This: My Life and Strange Times in Television.
